“ Scot was an amazing person. His southern boy charm was real. I never heard anyone say anything bad about him because he was just a god person who always did the right thing. We trained together at the very first cruise job I had & he made everything fun. We were in the breakroom together the morning the airplanes hit the twin towers I was pregnant with my 2nd child & scared about what was to come but he calmed me down.

“ Scott gave the word gentleman it's true meaning. He was the most sincerely kind man, I have ever met. While I had spoken to Scott many times on the phone with work tasks, we had not met until a company dinner. At that company dinner, I was lucky enough to sit next to him. When our food came out he noticed I ordered mac and cheese. He said, I didn't know we could order that and said mine looked really good, he told me he would have to try some. Even though that was the first time we met he wanted to share my mac and cheese. Oddly enough, I simply said this is the best mac and cheese ever and I shared it. Of course and we have been friends ever since and often laughed together about life's little things like mac and cheese. Scott's personality was one that you just wished everyone had, he was just so genuine, which is truly hard to find in people these days. The morning Scott passed, I was taking a morning walk. On my walk I saw this beautiful red cardinal. It reminded me of Scott, I am not exactly sure why but I thought fly away little bird and be free. The little bird flew away and I continued my walk home. It was when I got home that I found out Scott had passed. In my heart I know it was my friend's way of saying goodbye and he is now free. I will carry Scott's kindness in my heart forever and I will remember him each time I have comforting mac and cheese or see a beautiful red cardinal flying free. I love you and will miss you Scotty!
