“ My mommy and I had many great memories in my 37 years of life. Some of them were scary, some sad, some painful, and some over joyous. I can honestly say that life with my mommy was never dull. We'd argue over silliness and then makeup later over coffee, a Whopper, and some trips to various Sally's (Thrift Stores). Oh heck we did that anyways just because we got a wild hair up our butt to go lol, even when I grew up to be an adult. My mommy was the true definition of "We may not have much, but together we have it all.". I still to this day have no idea how mommy worked 2-3 jobs to raise the 4 of us, mainly me being I was the unplanned one 9 years after my sister. I swear my mommy is superhuman, right until her last breath. I am honored to be a part of my mommy's legacy to carry on. I'd never in my life try to fill those "shoes" of hers because those are some pretty humongous "shoes" to fill. I'd much rather just continue to share what she has taught me, teach others, and continue to share her legacy one story at a time. My heart now has an even bigger void that cannot be filled now that mommy is with David, but I know she is happy and unselfishly I cannot deny being happy for her. I love you so very much mommy now until the day the stars stop glowing.

“ I'll never forget the day, I met this family. I flew to Az, to be with Tammy. I was imedidetly, accepted by her and others. Jenny and I, bonded on the patio. I grew to love her quickly.
My thoughts and prayers are with all of you, I know exactly how rough this is. Love Regina.
