“ I met Caroline when she started dating my buddy Mal we all use to party together Allan's had the same friends and grew close they both were in our wedding and then they got married afterwards we raise our families and our kids grew up together then they moved south and we stayed friends and we would stay in touch with each other and we would visit a couple of times a year and I would bring my motorcycle and we would ride while we were there considered him a brother we enjoyed a lot of the same things and our wife's would put up with us both. Then we grew up a little and raised our families and then came the grandchildren with Mal and Carol loved deeply as do I . When Mal passed it was hard on her but you kids stayed close and that helped and it will help you all now stay close and don't forget we are all family if you ever need me or us we are here for you and when I come down this fall I want to see you guys and visit they're gave site sorry i can't be there Saturday love you all. “My husband, Chris, and I are so very sorry for your loss. We will always remember Caroline as a very warm person, always ready for a hug, laughing and smiling with abandon, and charmed beyond measure by her grandchildren. Her Facebook posts tell the story of a loving wife who dearly missed her beloved husband and son but drew strength from God. They tell a consistent story of love for and pride in her children. They tell a story of someone whose sense of humor remained in tact, despite tremendous loss. I can only imagine she will be dearly missed by her family, in particular, for years to come. Chris and I are so sorry. Love the way she loved. Her example will serve you well the rest of your days. In that sense- the best sense - she left a tremendous legacy.

“ Joe, Josh, Jake and Tasha,
There are just far too many memories to write about, 50 years worth!
Carol and I have laughed, cried, gotten in trouble and leaned on each other's shoulder during it all. We've had periods where we didn't talk often, but I knew she was there if I needed her.
She was my friend and confidant and I will miss her terribly. 💔
Love you all
Lynn
