Outside of his professional life, James had a deep passion for the simple things in life. He enjoyed travel, cooking and gardening. His green thumb turned his garden into a paradise of colorful blooms and hearty vegetables. He spent countless hours nurturing his plants and sharing his knowledge and bounty with his loved ones and neighbors.

His laughter and wisdom were a source of inspiration, and his presence brought comfort to the family and friends.

James leaves behind a community that is grateful for his contributions, a family forever enriched by his love, and a world touched by his generosity and kindness. His memory will be carried in our hearts as we continue to find joy in the simple pleasures of cooking, gardening, traveling, and, most importantly, spending time with our loved ones.
