“ My dad was my best friend and became a Razorback fan when I decided to go to the University of Arkansas. The last game I watched with him was when he was in the ICU. He then asked what bowl game they were going to be in and when. Tonight the Razorbacks played and beat KU in the All-State Bowl. I know he would have loved to watch the game and wish he was still here.

There are so many things that will be hard to do. My dad taught me how to golf and took me horseback riding. I helped him with yard work and he would take pictures of all the flowers that came up in the spring and summer. He would talk to me about his garden that he planted in the summer. He told me about his hometown and childhood, but not everything.

I wish I still had more time with him. I wanted him to be there when I bought my first house or condo, when I got my first dog, when I got married. He was supposed to refurbish an old coffee table and make shelves for my pantry in my future home. I wish he taught me his recipes and told me more about his childhood. He was supposed to grow old with my mom. There was not enough time and now there will never be time.

I love you dad and I will always love you.

“ Dear Brother, it hurts to my core knowing that you're gone. I'll miss our 9:00 am phone calls, our golf outings and laughing like we used to do. I'll miss you in the future when I tee-off, eat some good brisket or have a wee-dram of scotch, bourbon or whiskey! More than anything I'll miss having you be my sounding board through the good and bad times in our lives. Some would argue you were the good twin and I tend to agree. I wish I had more of your redeeming qualities but promise I will work hard for the rest of my days to make you proud. I will miss you till the end of time, love you Big Brother!

“ Tuck and I met Jim at a Jingle Mingle event, and they instantly clicked. Jim made the events fun for him. I loved getting to know Jim better when he spent a brief period of time every day at the library. He was curious, kind, and kept me smiling with his funny sense of humor. We are so sad to hear of his passing, and keeping you all in our prayers.
