“ My condolences for those who loved every moment of her presence from beginning to end. When you told me last year you had less than 2 years to live. I shattered, even before and after you told me. I made sure to give us happy and special moments of joy that will forever stay in our memories and heart.calls, texts, and even in person was a soulful and joyful moment. Thank you Jessica, this isn't goodbye, but see you next time you angel 💕.

“ Jess, you were and always will be my best friend. I loved you like a sister and even though we became friends after high school when we were already both full-blown adult adults, we brought out the kids side in each other all over again. We always had fun together, sometimes even got in a bit of trouble together, but I could always count on you to be my ride or die in my sidekick through all things. You were a free and beautiful spirit, and just as stubborn as me which we always used to joke about since you were a ram and I am a bull. You bright brightness to my life when I needed it most and I knew I could always depend on you. I am sorry for the past, stupid fights and I miss you more than you know. I love you so much and I always will. Until we meet again.

“ Jessica started at our workplace the same day, but I didn't get to know her until we had classes together, in Accounting, at Rowan-Cabarrus Community College.

She was actually a joy to be around and had a smile that would brighten up any gray day. And I would like to add that Jessica was a great classmate and an excellent Accounting student. She really was a whiz at cost accounting.

Jessica loved her Mom and her little doggy and she was just a beautiful young lady that I appreciate knowing.

To her family and friends, please accept my heartfelt condolences and may peace settle on your hearts.

Rest peacefully Jessica

“ A Cherished Bond:

When Jess first came to live with me at sixteen, I was filled with a blend of curiosity and uncertainty. Her quiet, reserved nature suggested she might remain distant—a guest in our home rather than a part of our family. Yet, as days turned into weeks, a remarkable transformation unfolded. Jess’s personality blossomed in ways both surprising and deeply heartwarming, and before long, she truly became my daughter.

Our relationship grew stronger through moments both big and small. I noticed her gradually mirroring my habits and introduced her to aspects of my life that felt intensely personal: the artful craft of makeup, the styling of hair, and a fondness for what I jokingly call a prissy sense of style. Watching Jess embrace these rituals was fascinating, especially when she confidently wore red lipstick—a bold choice I had never dared to make. She wore it with a flair and authenticity that made the color uniquely hers, embodying a self-assurance that radiated far beyond the mirror.

Her frequent requests for my outgrown clothes symbolized far more than a simple passing of garments; they spoke to an intimate weaving of our identities. To Jess, these pieces were treasures, bridges between who I was and who she was becoming. Our connection thrived on an uncommon openness—she shared her thoughts and feelings freely, leaving no room for assumptions or misunderstandings. This honesty nurtured a bond that was deeply genuine and profoundly rewarding for us both.

Though Jess’s absence will be felt by all who loved her, the memories of our shared silences, heartfelt conversations, and everyday rituals endure. They stand as a testament to how love and trust, even when born from uncertain beginnings, have the extraordinary power to awaken the best in each other and create bonds that last a lifetime.

I love you always Jess
